This series runs a good race with Harry Potter. Great

Wonderful sequel. :)

In the first story, my favorite part was when they managed to destroy the casue of the plague, and Kurisock, and Ephira, even though Lena had to sacrifice herself to do so. My least favorite aprt was when Lena sacrificed herself, and when the Fairy Queen's Shirne in Fablehaven was destroyed. In the second story, my favorite part was when they managed to defeat Glommus and Siletta, without getting very hurt. My leat favorite aprt was when Gavin revealed himself to acyually be Navarog, and ate Dougan, and trapped Warren and Bubda in the world inside the knapsack. I also liked, in the second story, how Raxtus was helping Kendra.

I know I have read all of these books, not sure why this one is being added so much later, but if it was awful I would not have continued. I love this writer, his style and his story. Sometimes it twists a bit much, but if your kids love fantasy and are over 8/9/10 I would read it to them. It is awesome.

I liked how the people were mysterious and they were all powerful like the demons. Good book. They go on many adventures. They learned how to work as a team.

Hmm... thought I already reviewed this book.

Suffice it to say: ingenious author; great book; extraordinary series.

Mortalform says

This is an interesting series, and Mull seems to have found his formula to keep the pace interesting and the adventures fresh. Worth reading through I sometimes hate that just when it seems safe to like the characters in this series, friends turn out to be the most villainous and the villains become friends again. The amount of betrayal in the series is starting to become disheartening, though it doesn't seem to be affecting the characters as strongly as one would think. Not sure what the author is trying to illustrate with this other than you can trust anybody in these books. I'm amazed the main cast still seem to trust each other more or less enough to function.

Mild spoiler alert

I also was having trouble with why the main bad guy wants to usher in the end of the world, since that doesn't seem like good business for anyone. This is every so slightly addressed in this book, which was well timed.

"...We're not much different from a wildlife conservationist trying to protect ugly bats or spiders or mosquitoes from extinction. These refuges exist to protect all magical creatures, the fair ones and the foul ones alike." p 133

"Recognizing dark elements imperceptible to others doesn't make you evil," Grandpa said firmly. "Neither does having courage. We all possess different gifts and abilities. How we use those gifts determines who we are." p 159

"I can not make you evil anymore than you could make me good. You worry that accepting aid from a demon somehow alters your identity... You remain free to use your gifts however you chose." p225

Thank you Brandon for a series that any age can read and enjoy! Absolutely love the series!

Ben Wise says

This was not my favorite in the series, but do not have a least favorite because all of them are so good.

Jaryn Law says

It is making me hungry for more

Lincoln says

This is a great book, as good or even better than the first book. I liked how every part in the book is super good. There are so many cliff hangers and mysteries and betrayals - but I don't like the betrayals. It's just a 100% fantastic good book
