Presence, Volume II: The Intimacy of All Experience Rupert Spira

All that is known is experiencing, and experiencing is not divided into one part (an inside self) that experiences and another part (an outside object, other, or world) that is experienced. Experiencing is seamless and intimate, made of “knowing” or awareness alone. This intimacy, in which there is no room for selves, objects, or others, is love itself. It lies at the heart of all experience, completely available under all circumstances.

Advaita says

A poet of the art of being present and discovering your true nature.

Jamie Watters says

Rupert's ability to find words to frame the ineffable nature of awareness is in a league of his own.

Unlike the majority of earlier enlightened folk that came spontaneously to an unsought awakening, Rupert was an ardent seeker so he has a rare sympathy and understanding of our plight as seekers. This understanding informs and permeates his every word.

He is the master of the metaphor and uses these with finesse to point us towards the deeper truth and find our own answer to the mystical question of "Who am I?"
