Sterek

“Three weeks,” Derek says.

“Still don’t want to,” Stiles says.

“I’ll pay you,” Derek says, and that... that has Stiles interested. Alf’s Antique’s may be a great job, but it’s not a high-paying job, and half of Stiles’s tuition is coming from financial aid, so...

“How much,” Stiles asks, “are we talking here? Because I know your family, dude. And it’ll be kind of awkward after.”

“My family thinks you’re some sort of fucking gift to the world,” Derek seethes, like he’s jealous, “they’ll probably be pissed at me when we break it off, so don’t worry about that. Five hundred bucks.”

“A thousand,” Stiles says, because screw ethics. Also, the Hale family is loaded. Derek can deal.

Margaret Foxe says

Another solid Sterek read. Well written, snarky to the max, well crafted AU and plot. And really hot Sterek action. I have been watching Teen Wolf, but I have to say that I think the fanfic, particularly the Sterek fanfic, is far more awesome than the actual show. Who cares about Scott and his problems? He's kind of annoying. But Derek (yum). And Stiles, oh Stiles! Sigh

Enough said?

Trix says

I feared, at first, this might get at best 3 stars from me. But it got better along the way and moved to 4 stars by the end of it.

The animosity and tension and name calling and bickering got irritating after the first few dozen pages in the book. It was hard to picture Stiles and Derek having any feelings for each other when these feelings were barely hinted at, and even then, they were lost in the maelstrom of insults thrown between the two. It felt like I needed a fanfiction for this fanfiction, just to get their real feelings on the surface.

Nice!

Lilia Ford says

Ridiculously well-written, with a seriously chill pacing that you really only find in fanfiction. Considering that this is AU, the entire premise is as perfect a set-up as you could find for evoking the Platonic ideal of "Sterek"--in other words, it's funny, sexy, and gets at the heart of the chemistry behind that delicious antagonism of theirs.

Bottom line: Must Read for Sterek lovers.

Karen Wellsbury says

Having had a good rich run of Sterek this was my first disappointment.

The fake boyfriend premise, has been done to death, but I was hoping for some sarky, witty banter as well. I got some, but it felt a little off, like trying too hard.

The characters felt slightly 'off' and adolescent, which bearing in mind Derek was 27 made it a little weird, plus there was no real reason for the fakery.

However, the build up was good, and Laura was terrific.

I may, one day, watch an episode of this !

2.5 stars

This started off so great and carried well for about a little more than halfway and I so wanted it to work, but then I am not really sure what happened - it just became well, weird. Despite always hating the Laura character in these stories, this one had potential. For the first half of the story the dynamic between Stiles and Derek was pretty spot on in their "reluctant allies" banter. Then all of a sudden there was this weird Wiccan twist to the story that popped up as soon as the two finally got together (and honestly that's where the story should have stopped), but it kept going and going and became silly. I think it was supposed to be comical, but after this great tension build up and amusing first half, the new twist really didn't fit.

Reread Feb 20 2018--rating and sentiment unchanged. The magic was pretty cool.

Post-graduate Sterek offering where an item Stiles runs across cause all kinds of changes in his life. Sweet and adorable, where Derek is all bark and no bite--okay, maybe a little biting.

3.5 Stars

God, that had been the most idiotic of all idiotic plans.

So really, all of this is Derek's fault, and he should make it up to Stiles in a multitude of creative ways.

Jennifer?Pher? says

I liked the story and all that but I needed just a bit less snark and a little more sweet, especially, you know, when they should have been sweet :) I just didn't feel their voices in this one.

[(magic Stiles... er, no thanks) (hide spoiler)]

This was the perfect cute/snark balance I like in my fan fic. Happy sigh.

Best Fake Boyfriend Sterek I've read yet...

Also, I think the chapter/epilogue from Laura's POV - the one that basically gave meaning to the title - was my favorite.

Loederkoningin says

It's time to read about teenage boys getting it on again and kind of getting off on it, possibly. Wack. Whatever, I'm comfortable in my creepiness.

2.5 With a trope like this, you can't go wrong. And yet I didn't enjoy this fic as much as I'd hoped I would. It's true that Zosofi is not a bad writer at all, but the problems I encountered in this fic were piling up. One of them mostly the common beginner mistake of a starting writer, but one that she makes with so much enthusiasm, that overlooking it was not really an option.

Of course I'm talking about the characters being unable to simply say or state something. Instead, they snarl out every bloody sentence. They glare, wince, snarl some more..and then just..more. Every teasing comment, or just any comment really, unleashes their fury. There are mentions of Derek's face cringing up so bad that it almost collapses into itself. It's all so completely over the top that it feels like watching a mime play unfold rather than reading a story. It makes for tedious reading. Though It gets slightly better along the way, when they're warming up to each other.

The supposed ages of Derek (27) and Stiles (23) didn't ring true either. Their personalities and behavior screamed young teenagers. I suspect the writer herself is young still, which is okay, but it would've been a better idea to knock a few years off the age of her MCs accordingly. It would've made the plot of Derek going through all that trouble to fake a relationship for his sister perhaps somewhat more plausible too. Which 27 year old guy would give so many fucks about what his sister thinks of his one-night stands?

Add to that the fact that the story dragged, the same jokes were repeatedly played out, and elements that IMHO absolutely didn't belong in the story in the first place, were added, and this one was a miss for me. That's okay. I think this writer has it in her to become much better in time and with constructive feedback.

ANOTHER NICE STEREK FANFIC.

The first 70% of the book for me were funny, hilarious, entertaining and very engaging. Stiles and Derek trying to do the fake boyfriend thing was just so hilarious. Normally when I stumble upon this kind of theme, the fake boyfriend thing, I find it cheesy and ridiculous. I mean, does someone do that in real life? But zosofi's take on it was a little refreshing. And I totally enjoyed it.

Until the last 30% came. It's not bad actually, but it's kinda dull. Their revelation, the climax, the final love scenes weren't as romantic, spectacular, or gratifying as I hope it would be. I needed more from what I got. It's still quite entertaining though. But I struggled a little to finish it. I was falling asleep on some parts.

Overall, this is another entertaining and adorable Sterek fanfic.

A healthy dose for all Sterek addicts like me out there. We don't have a rehab, so...let's just indulge ourselves with them. XD

ENJOY!

I loved this fic so much.

And I didn't even really like Laura.

Here's why: because Laura feels like the kind of person that I wouldn't be able to stand irl, and she gets to me because she's realistic and a fantastically well drawn character.

Just like every other character in this fic, starting with Stiles and Derek and including Scott.

(Derek feels just like a version of the TW sourwolf that actually talks. It's brilliant. And there are lines about Stiles taken straight from Derek's brain like For the past seven years, he's just been this constant buzzing in the periphery. Always there with a sarcastic comment or a fucking joke made at Derek's expense, treating Derek like he's younger one that kinda blow my mind with how accurate they are, and you'll notice that if you've watched the show.)

Both the writing and the relationship development are smooth and sexy, and there is zero unnecessary drama and a lot of insightful observations, Stiles-typical humor, and touching and sniffing.

It's like a vaguely delirious rom-com with werewolves and Wiccan magic and theses and soundproof rooms. And I don't even like rom-coms, but this is the bomb.

Otila says

I love the fake boyfriend trope. Add some magic and lots of snarky banter and you get a great read.

Camille Adams says

I read and rated this some time ago and somehow it disappeared.

Nonetheless, this was great! I LOVED it :-)
