Hard to say what made me "only" give it three stars, but there was something about the MCs that was a bit... off. They were talking and thinking, but the words didn't QUITE shape those really living, believable personalities that jump out out of the pages. Like the author tried to copy the characters from the series, but the personalities weren't DEEPLY imbedded in the characters, so it slipped once in a while and became generic. Close one, though, and I still liked it.

One of the best books I've ever read.

"Life is Difficult.

This is a great truth, on of the greatest truths. Its a great truth because once we truly see this truth, we transcend it. Once we truly know that life is difficult - once we truly understand and accept it - then life is no longer difficult. Because once it is accepted, the fact that life is difficult no longer matters."

"... let us indicate in ourselves and in our children the means of achieving mental and spiritual health ... let us teach ourselves and our children the necessity of suffering and the value thereof, the need to face problems directly and to experience the pain involved ... What are these tools, these techniques of suffering, these means of experiencing the pain of problems...? There are four: delaying of gratification, acceptance of responsibility, dedication to truth, and balancing. "

Another fanfiction by the ever amazing verityburns. This one is a great read and every fan of "The Heart In The Whole" will definitely love this one as well.

EDIT 19/01/17: I still love this fanfiction very much. And I really needed it after the disastrous fourth season...
