One girl. Two horses. And a past itching to catch up.

Fourteen-year-old, Colorado juvenile delinquent Mackenzie Lynn Stonebreaker doesn't do horses. But the volunteer gig at Hunter's Moon Ranch has its perks. With cold, hard cash she lifts from their boarding fund, Mac's poised for escape and the search for her birth mom when an Arabian mare named Bella and her colt Raider are viciously struck by gunfire. Alive and talking—well, telepathically only to Mac—they beg for her help.

Talking to horses totally freaks her out. But leaving them isn't an option. Ditching her plans for now, Mac becomes a modern-day Dr. Doolittle, surprisingly, looking for justice. Only Mac tends to act first and ask questions later. When her protective instinct for the horses gets in the way of her good sense, she finds herself, once again, on the other side of the law.

Dodging a return trip back to juvie, thanks to the ranch's resident pediatrician Dr. Rachel Hunter, Mac is now in her custody and living a life she could only dream. With newfound friendships, the gift of gab with two quirky horses, her first kiss, and a chance at that family she's always wanted, she can't quite let go of one thing.

Abandoned and unloved by her mother, Mac wants to know why. But sleuthing for answers puts Mac on a collision course with the past—one that will shatter everything she believes about herself and those she's come to love and trust at Hunter's Moon.

C.J. Darlington says

A cute YA book that held my interest. The author did a great job with the horse details (minus one galloping session by a novice rider). A few times Mac's thinking seemed younger than a fifteen-year-old, but that wasn't enough to detract from my enjoyment. I'd recommend for middle-grade especially if not for some mild language.

Getting to know you

This book will take to to a place in your heart that will help you be a better person. It starts out that she has no one. No family or friends and is in trouble. All that changes and she means something, she matters.
