Guess Who's Coming to Die? Patricia Sprinkle

Georgia magistrate, mother, wife, and sometime sleuth MacLaren Yarbrough has been invited to join the Magnolia Ladies' Investment Club and is plumb confused-she's definitely no heiress. But she tables that thought when, at her first meeting, she finds outgoing club president Willena Kenan dead on the bathroom floor with a corkscrew protruding from her neck. Since it happened during a coffee break, when everyone left the room separately, no club member is above suspicion. But when the police find a trench coat with incriminating evidence, things get sticky.

Jan Garrison says

I throughly enjoy her books,although they may not be high faluten :) I can always count on Sprinkle to entertain me

---

Deb_bluerose says

Lighthearted Mystery Series about a sweet-ol', little southern Lady...

---

Julie says

A little slow but still a fun read.

Joanna says

Very fun series. I enjoy the strong Southern women and their strong Southern families. The mysteries are nicely plotted and the gardens are simply marvelous.

---

Linda says

Another good mystery and I thought the ending was really good.

---

Judith says

This series is getting old quick!

---

Jannie says

Love this series. Wish Patricia Sprinkle would write more of them, but I think she's finished. I really enjoy the adventures of McLaren and her family.

---

Babs says

This was a funny read. Mac gets herself into a bit of trouble as everyone at the club she just joined is under suspicion of murder of the president of the club.

---

---

Erin72 says

Rather slow and boring in parts had to push myself to finish. A southern woman mystery, so very different to my world and the characters I did not relate to at all.

---

Lois Hecksel says

The "A Thoroughly Southern Mystery" series is thoroughly enjoyable and #9 is continues with charm, wit, tradition, and intrigue.
