Excellent little book, with lift-the-flaps on each page, as you follow baby Spot on his first solo walk.

Even though Natalie enjoys Where's Spot?, she couldn't get more than three pages into this one for some reason. Baffling to me. I liked the cool different locations for the flaps as the story went on, such as the garden plants. This one really told a story, too.

Eileen Espuma says

In this adventure book, there is a yellow brown spot puppy name Spot. His mom gave him permission to walk on his own but along the journey spot comes to some places that he will find some surprises. This is an easy word and colorful book to have beginner readers to experience a book. It's a fun book because it has some interactive to have kids to be interested in reading to the end of the story. Everyone will enjoy this book because it's about a puppy and everyone loves puppies. Come grab the book and have fun reading with your child on this puppy adventure.

Sarita says

My boy loves to lift the flaps and see what is hiding underneath.

Nick says

We love Spot in our house, but we love him even more now because Spot's First Walk is the first book my one-year old son would sit through and then ask to be read again. I was starting to get worried he wouldn't like books as much as his mom, dad and sister do, but my faith has been restored!

Karen says

Typical Spot shenanigans.

Asho says

This is a cute little pop-up board book. Spot goes out for a walk and behind each flap there is a surprise. My son is not quite old enough for lift-the-flap books since he wants them to be gleefully-rip-off-the-flap books, but he enjoys playing with them.

I was looking for a change of pace from reading Where's Spot? to my preschool granddaughter. She enjoys this Spot book, but it isn't as much of a hit as [book:Where's Spot?|132609. I think the problem is that the story doesn't lend itself so well to variation so Grandma gets bored and can't keep that note of excitement in her voice.

Cai says

Another great Spot book! I love how the words are easy to track for the littlest of readers!

Kelli Carlson says

Spot's First Walk by Eric Hill is a picture book in which pictures are hidden under pop ups on the page. It is interactive and allow the reader to open the flaps to discover what is inside. The book is about Spot on his walk. He discovers chickens, a cat, slug, a rabbit, a bone, water and finally returns back home. The print is big and bold and easy to read. It is a short story that could be read to a class. It keeps their attention and allows them to guess and predict what is hiding under the pictures. I think it's a really fun book for younger kids.

Flaps are always in style

Kaitlyn Tankersley says

Spot's First Walk is the perfect book for students learning to read. This book could be used for advanced Pre-K students to Kindergarten students learning to read. This book is about a dog named Spot going on his very first walk and all the different experiences he has. For an activity I would ask the students to draw a picture of something they would want to see on a walk.

Megababy says

A fun book following Spot on his walk. My mommy doesn't let me go on walks by myself yet. But someday I will have as much fun as spot exploring the world. I won't fall in the water though! I might like my own copy of this book, other kids tore some of the flaps out of this library copy.
