Antonella says

Very short and my least fav scene when Curran and Kate met while she went on a "date" with Saiman.

Tricia says

an unbreakable facade breaks....

Dolores Johnson says

This was one of my favorite scenes of this book. I just wish it extended to when Saimon dropped her off

I love Curran so I always enjoy the chance to get inside his head. This is his POV from the Conclave in Magic Bleeds where he walks in to the meeting between the Pack and the People only to spot Kate in the restaurant with Saiman. If you've read Magic Bleeds you'll already know exactly how unhappy that makes him LOL. I have to admit this is probably my least favourite Curran POV, it doesn't really add much to the story and I would have liked it to be longer than it is but it's still a fun read and it's free so there really isn't anything to complain about!

Jennifer says

Hm...he's still not growing on me. Maybe I'm just weird.

TinaMarie says

This snippet is at the restaurant, Curran's point of view when he sees Kate with Saiman. It was way too short I definitely would have liked his side of the story for the rest of that evening.

Carolyn F. says

I read this off the authors' website.

I forgot about this meeting. I really feel sorry for Curran at that moment. 4 stars.

Mel says

I don't believe I've read this particular scene from Curran's POV and while Conclave was appreciated, I wish we had gotten more. And by more, I mean all of that stuff that happened after Saiman, Kate, and Curran left Bernard's. It would've been nice to see what hunting Saiman was like through Curran's eyes.

If you're interested in the Curran POV Collection, it's a free read and can be found here:

3.5 Stars

Cheesecake says

I don't know what this one adds to the series really.

It was pretty clear in the book what Curran was thinking during this scene, without rehashing his POV here. It's the part where Curran goes to a meeting with the 'People' at a restaurant where Kate is playing guard disguised as date to an inebriated Siaman.

But it cuts short before the good stuff.

Anto says

Jelly Curran is for sure a force to be reckoned with :)

Perri says

I was curious to how he felt about this scene.
