Geoff says

I bought a trio of Charles de Lint books from a Subterranean Press auction; paying full price for Moonheart and getting two free books. This was one of them, a trio of three short stories. This is my first foray with this author, and I was pretty impressed, but not overly so. Still I did enjoy this book, one story is based of the music band The Clash which I enjoyed, since I am also a fan of their music. All three stories were set in the world of Newford; and since I am ignorant of this setting I am assuming it is a fictional place set in North America. DeLint is Canadian, so maybe it is set in Canada. Anyway these are all urban fantasy stories; real people, current technology but with a fantastical twist. Good stuff!

Everything I have read by Charles de Lint is truly bewitching.

So, it turns out I'd already read this one before, but I like it, so I read it again.

I like the three stories of redemption, almost and righting wrongs. They're three good ones.

As a little mini short story collection of three, I recommend it. And de Lint's Newford books will always be my favourite, I think.

Cindywho says

Three solid de Lint stories with ghosts and faerie and time travel told in his gentle style.
