Wow. That was incredibly hard to get through. It felt like forever to just read this one. I didn't like the story at all and it felt like it dragged on and on. I'm glad that's over. Also, ending was crap. Totally crap. Vraga just leaves? No showdown at the end with him and Buffy? What a wimp.

Meh. I've long been meh about Christopher Golden's stuff, and this is very meh.

Slightly infuriating nods to other Christopher Holden creations in the Buffyverse, original characters from his other novels pop up to show us how cool they are, before disappearing again.

We were not well served by Buffy comics before Season 8 cropped up. I'm not sure I've read any good ones.

Wish there had been more Spike, but an interesting story regardless.

I really liked this buffy graphic novel. In particular there are some really cute bits of willow and xander as cute children and of Spike's memories of Vienna.

I may be missing something. Maybe things'll click if I read other Buffy stuff? Maybe the story could be told better, though

Once again Christopher Golden has written a great story, I just could not put it down. He is definitely one of my favourite Buffy writers.

This story takes place during season four when Willow and Buffy start College. Buffy's having some trouble trying to manage all aspects of her life and finds that she's spreading herself too thin and not giving school or slaying her best. Buffy makes a mistake that has some dire consequences.

Spike and Dru appear in the story, with Spike having more of a main roll. There are some fantastic new villains, and I just loved how Christopher Golden drops little bits here and there regarding characters you may remember from past stories. Not essential to the current story, but fun for those of us who have read a few and can say “hey, it’s....” :0)

The illustrations are great, and the detail that was put into designing some of the new monsters was awesome.

A definite must read for any Buffy fan.
