From Reader Review 1776: A Story in Tweets for online ebook

Emma Clement says

I had trouble finding an e-copy of this online, but I'm glad I persevered to find one! It was a short and sweet read, and it made me enjoy history! (I usually hate history). Very funny, I think everyone should read this. If I'd read this in middle school when they tried to yeah this to us, I think I would've been much more interested (or at least less averse) to the subject.

Dayse Dantas says

Maureen, you are perfect

Brandy Shark says

Very clever and funny. I like that she picked the Revolutionary War. It gave her a lot of characters/figures to work with as well as a good chunk of history to dabble with.

Ellie McKee says

Bizarre.

Katie says

Maureen Johnson has an unparalleled sense of humor. I laughed so hard I cried. Possibly funnier than Haikus for Jews: For You, a Little Wisdom, and I don't say that lightly.

Stefanie Kellum says

That Paul Revere tweet. LOL.

Bernardo says

Maureen is the funniest person alive. Please, don't let her die. Ever.

---

the (book) supplier says

Okay, that was hilarious.

Hilde Kuyper says

Hilariously funny.

Gigi Romano says

This was quirky and wonderfully put together just like Maureen herself. It was a quick read obviously as it was written in tweets, but it was so much fun and really quite hilarious. And the last bit actually had be laughing out loud. It was definitely worth my money and my attention.

Heba says

Maureen is one of of the most insanely hilarious beings on this planet, and this is all the evidence you will ever need. I laughed so hard.

Caitlin says

If you follow her on Twitter, you know Maureen Johnson is a "master tweeter." The madness usually contained in her tweets has overflowed into this interesting, humorous book. I am not at all surprised that this is what Johnson contributed to the Project for Awesome.

Ilse says

You know what?
This was pretty fun.

I really didn't like the first couple of tweets, maybe I just didn't get them, but they got funnier and funnier as they went on and by the time King George the third came along I was giggling out loud.
So yeah a solid 3 stars, short but sweet!

Nathalie says

lololololol Paul Revere

Anna Nowinski says

Cute, funny, and quick
