Pierce Me Simone Sowood

She's never had an O. I'm going to make up for that.

When Eloise walks into my tattoo parlor, she thinks she knows what she's after - a piercing to help take her where no man can.

?But I don't want to help her the way she thinks.

?I had a crush on her all the way through grade school.?

The last time I saw her was seventh grade, when my life was falling apart.

?Now she has the same cute pony tail as always but the rest of her grown up body makes me hard just looking at it.?

I'll give her a piercing alright, and it will be the deepest one of her life.?

Never had an O, welcome to Oh My God!

From Reader Review Pierce Me for online ebook

Steffi De Ceuster ♥ says

I've read the blurb and was instantly interested. It looked like it was going to be lot's of fun.

Eloise can't get an orgasm and find in a magazine that a piercing can be a solution, but Gabe the tattoo/piercer thinks differently. He wants to make a bet he can give her an O, but he wants a dinner in return. So let the fun begin.

It was a lot of fun, but not entirely like I expected. I was honestly a bit glad it was a short one.

It had a lot of drama in it even though it was a shortie! But not enough drama to scare you away. It wasn't able to pull me in completely even though I enjoyed it I didn't fell for the characters.

On my kobo it ended at 33% so now there are other ones or maybe one but I'm not sure if I'm starting them immediately.

I always look forward to reading a new Simone Sowood book. I've enjoyed every single one of them. They are unique, sexy and great books. I always go in blind so I'm not going to say anything about the plot, because I loved why they met and how the story progressed.

Gabe owns a tattoo parlor and he loves tattoos. He knows what he wants and he's willing to work for it. When he sees Eloise, he wants her, but Eloise is hesitant. He's determined to make her realize that they could be great together. Gabe loves to spend time with Eloise. He does keep a secret from her that could ruin their relationship.

Eloise is passionate about her work and she loves doing it. She isn't always happy that she works for her parents, because they can be overbearing sometimes and have some wishes. But she loves the Sunday's dinners at their places and she loves catching up with her sister. Eloise is insecure about men and isn't looking for a man at moment, until she meets Gabe. She likes him a lot and can't stop thinking about him.

**contains spoilers**

I couldn't stand the two main characters in this story, Eloise had a stick stuck so far up her ass and Gabe was a whiny little bitch. Excuse my french.

Gabe had been in love with Eloise since grade school and when she coincidentally came to his tattoo parlor for a genital piercing (*am I the only person who flinches as the thought? *shivers**) he convinced her to go on a date so he could teach her the wonders of sex.

The only problem was Gabe blamed Eloise's parents for the death of his mother.

And here lies my biggest issue. Gabe was a whiny little bitch who after over a decade still blames doctors for his mother withholding symptoms and leaving it too late before actually going to the doctors. He blamed Eloise most of her life because she was the easiest target and found it hard to deal with his emotions for her because of his hatred for her parents.

Her parents being the doctors who missed her cancer because she came in presenting only with a back ache and refused to mention the other **embarrassing** symptoms that could of helped them identify the problem.

Once again, drama for the sake of drama. I can't stand it, it drives me up the wall.

Gabe was twenty-seven, I think at that age a human being can discern truth from fiction. I understand the grief he must deal with after losing his mother young, but the whole story was based on a person being completely unreasonable. Gabe was immature and reckless, not a good combination in my opinion.

He pressured Eloise into having sex in her office, which if her parents didn't own the practice she worked at, would have resulted in her being fired.

And if the fact she had sex with a patient got to the medical board she could have had her license revoked. HER LICENSE REVOKED?! Honestly, she risked her career for the Big O?

Priorities people, do you have any?

I really liked this one. Eloise and Gabe, loved them.

This read is hot, sexy, fun and keeps you turning, with a few twists added in.

Eloise reads an article in a magazine reads 'how to get a mind blowing Orgasm' by getting a clitoral piercing. She decides that is what she wants and calls for an appointment at a tattoo parlour, thinking she will get a female employee. Only on arrival is met with Gabe, the owner of the business and a former classmate.

Gabe is hot, intense, sexy, with his own piercings and littered in tattoos man, and more importantly he wants Eloise. Eloise soon discovers what a real orgasm feels like.

So, this was fun.

And, it is exactly what you are expecting, but in a good way. I enjoy erotic romance, and this one definitely delivers. The fun, at least in my opinion, of a good erotic romance is that the sex, and the situations, are both hot and vaguely dirty.

Nailed it.

The idea that their first meeting is when Eloise makes an appointment in Gabe's tattoo shop to have her clit pierced. She wants to have orgasms and better sex. Well, she gets her wish...albeit in a slightly different way than she was anticipating.

But, that is the fun of the erotic romance, the meet-cute being a little more sexual than the regular romance. And, this is more toward the romantic side of erotic. I am not even sure the author would call this title "erotic" but rather a 5 in heat level. Either way, it is hot.

I liked Gabe and Eloise. I am not how I felt about the secret that he had, or really the thing he didn't tell her about why he wasn't interested in spending time with her family. I think the issue I had was mainly in the pacing of it, as I thought the resolution came awfully quickly. Yes, there was some new info that he received that could have resulted in him changing his opinion on the situation, but it was too fast for me to totally be able to buy it. I think, and I seem to be saying this a lot lately, that the reveal happened too late in the story for me to fully be able to believe the HEA ending. Will they get there? Yes. Is it going to be right away? No, I think there is more work that needs to be done.

That said, the epilogue and the ending of the book are a year in the future, so it works overall, I think I would have liked to see more of them dealing with it together than we got. If that makes sense.

But, overall, I did enjoy this book and I do recommend it.

ARC exchanged for an honest review

What I love most about Simone is it really makes me appreciate all these authors who aren't extremely well known and how much work and time they put into what they write. How many books are out there that are just waiting to be read but aren't because the author isn't as well known as Sylvia Day or Colleen Hoover. Just my deep thought of the day.

Another really good piece of work by Simone. I love the story lines that she creates. It is always something so fun.

We have Eloise, a perfectionist of sorts. Her family is filled with successful people and so she needs to be successful as much as she needs to marry success. She is 27 and has had failed relationship after failed relationship. And by failed, I mean she has never felt sexually satisfied which obviously equals automatic failure. Oh, you can't get me off either, NEXT. She reads this magazine article because obviously we should listen to everything Cosmo says. It basically talked about clitoral piercings and how they help you orgasm. By the way, I really need to research these things because if it is true, sign me the fuck up. Miss Eloise decided to get the piercing and makes an appointment. And as the blurb says...

"When Eloise walks into my tattoo parlor, she thinks she knows what she's after - a piercing to help take her where no man can.

She meets Gabe. This uber delicious hunk of a man. And things get super hot as Eloise is wide open for him on his chair.

Gabe remembers Eloise. The girl from grade school that he undeniably loved. Due to some unfortunate situations, he had to move away and that was that. Until he returned to that same town to open his own shop, his dream. Seeing Eloise again confirms his feelings for her hasn't changed (even after like fifteen years or whatever) but he doesn't want a relationship. He just wants her, her body, for whatever it is. If that makes sense. I would never say no. Never ever ever.

This is why I had to settle for four stars instead of five...

The conflict was crap. CRAP. I was expecting some huge blow out for what happened in the past. Maybe an affair or that the actual conflict was not an accident. You're probably reading this rolling your eyes and thinking I have gone crazy. I am just doing my best at not spoiling anything.

Even for an ARC, the errors were at a minimum and the writing was great. It is written in both perspectives and you get your HEA. So, if you want a quick and fun read, pick this up. And when you're done, let me know where you went to get your new piercing and if you met a super hot tattoo artist. Just for research. I want to know the chances of this happening, because dreams.

Pretty good! Very hot and safe. The only reason I gave this 3 stars is because I'm unclear on whether he had sex with other women bare. It's never confirmed but this made me think he had went bareback before :

"My dick screams at me to get in her. The temptation to put it in her without a condom, and feel her wet walls against my skin, is overwhelming. With any other girl I wouldn't give a fuck and do it anyway, but not Eloise."

Now like I said it is never confirmed even when they do finally go without a condom. I just don't like when my heroes goes bareback with OW, I like that to be special between the hero and h. I'm just too picky lol

Rejane says

I was trying for something light and funny to get rid of this book funk. Honestly I found myself again, being fooled by my own foolishness. So the female mc is this 27 years old uptight straight laced physiotherapist who never had a O in her life and decided to get her vajayjay pierced. So far, normal imo. BUUUT... she called this tattoo parlor and makes this appointment with a woman so she would feel more comfortable. She never had a tattoo and she didn't even know if she knew anyone who had tattoos so she never had to go to a tattoo parlor before, right. Again, normal imo. Then comes the part where things get ridiculous. Where the female mc gets ridiculous and of course becomes this hot and bothered woman in the presence of a hot male. When she got there for her appointment the girl who was supposed to pierce her wasn't there. Can anyone guess who was? Yep.. out hot tattooed only dude. Btw, the 1st impression he left on the female mc was "fear". Ooohhhh.. a big scary tattoo dude. #not. Lol

After a little talking and her asking him where the girls was and he telling her she wouldn't be there and he would be the one to do her genital piercing she refused for a second and turned to leave but only took the male mc tells her she would really feel good that she decided right there she would allow him to do it. Not very shy at all for out uptight girl, eh??!!

What happens next is a bunch of unbelievable events even for romance fiction it was too much to suspend belief. A person don't change her ways in a matter of seconds. For a person who overthinking everything like we were let know the female mc did, this openness to this freshly met male mc was too much.

They were having entire conversation with her clit between his finger and her feeling hot and bothered. She was so wet she drenched the towel he had under her.

"As he touches it, my walls flood and I inwardly thank him for putting down the towel. "

"Unexpectedly, a deep moan escapes my throat, and I immediately blaze scarlet from head to toe....., I struggle to care about anything other than Gabe's fingers. "

"I clench my teeth together to stop from crying out. No one has ever touched me like that. I can't believe how good it feels. " (he was rubbing his fingers together simulating where the pierce would rub.

"Ordinarily I would never let anyone like him touch me. Right now all I want to do is sit in his chair forever. " (typical good girl gone bad and judgmental of one looks. Remember, big scary tattooed guy).

I never had tattoos or intimate piercings. But I am almost sure the professional doing it to you would have conversations and technical explanations while rubbing your clit. "A silence falls between us. He keeps moving his fingers, and my entire body buzzes. ..." and the male mc realizes she doesn't need a genital pierce. She only needs the right guy.

Well, in a book like this I never saw that coming. Would you. The male mc would be the savior of the day. "The Way Eloise is squirming under my touch makes it pretty clear that she doesn't need a piercing to have an orgasm. "

And our lady ask him why. "It didn't take much to make it all wet down here. "

And then he suggests to her that he can get her off right there. She asked what happened to being a professional ( none of them were being) and he said he was doing a favor for an old friend. That's when she finds out they went to middle school together blah blah blah. They have a entire dialogue about school, and life after school and what parents were doing, what they're doing as for work ( his work we already know )and all the time she had her legs spread with his head between them.

Now he wants to take her to dinner and make her come without the pierce first so she could make sure she want one.

How thoughtful, right??

"Yet here I am. In a tattoo parlor with my legs spread, and a heavily tattooed man is trying to get me off. ..."

Then our prime and proper who wants everything perfect and overthinks everything ask him to get her off right there. "Fine, get me off." "Just do it, if you're going to. "

"The piercing was the entire reason I came here. It's the thing that's supposed to make me orgasm. Not to be fingered by some random guy who works in a tattoo parlor. "

He keeps telling her he can't do it right now because she was worked up. Because she was uptight. And she becomes offended. I was LMAO. Is this for real.

Am I to believe an uptight woman who never had an orgasm would spread her legs for a guy in a tattoo parlor and having entire conversation while he had her clit in his finger? But I do believe. Because that's wages authors do. They turn women in this entire stupid being with completely different personality when they find a hot male. Like a female on heat with no self control. That's horrible. Imo, normally, a woman described as our heroine would leave that parlor when she found out the girl who was supposed to pierce her wasn't there. They didn't even had the decency to call her to tell about the appointment change. That's unprofessional. And this woman would not let a man doing it just because he was hot. This is underestimating our intelligence. Nobody changes in a matter of minutes.

Then, after all that's said, done and "touched " she's offended. But still turned on.

"If my body wasn't on fire right now, I'd storm right out of here. I'd run away, offended, and forget today ever happened. But Gabe's fingers still have my clit between them, and there's no way my body will let me go anywhere. "

As if at that point I would believe in her uncomfortableness. After all these dialogue about orgasm, types of piercing, how they would work on her clit, he telling her he could get her of,just now she's uncomfortable? And all of this while her clit was between his fingers?? Did I miss something?

"The longer I sit there and let the whole thing run through my mind, the more and more uncomfortable I get. "

And right after her "uncomfortable thought"( and me not believing her for a second) this proves her wrong. "Gabe leaves his fingers where they are (in her clit, in case someone forgot), and places his other hand on the very top of my thigh. Maybe he's going to finger me". That's the level of uncomfortable she was. I only imagine if she was relaxed. Lol

And what she does? She starts paying attention to a watermark on his ceiling. And wondering if it was a 2 story building "cause all around there was. He tells her he can't get her off if her eyes weren't on him and she tells him he had a leak. What I found out was from his dishwasher. He lives upstairs. And he tugs on het clit and her head rolls against the chair.

"This is wrong

This is naughty.

But years of desperation wanting to know what the heroines in my books are feeling keeps me where I am. "

And that's where I decided to stop. I didn't even finish the chapter.

I understand it's fiction but I have no tolerance for 180 degrees change of personality in a couple of pages.

And always because of a hot man. I'm tired of these women being so easy persuaded into giving into things they'd never did before because a man told you it would make you feel good. Specially if the 1st impression you had of the guy wasn't a safe feeling. Buy he was scary. Yep, she wad also being judgmental. Judging by his tattoos. Nonetheless, she wouldn't put herself in the position of having her legs spread while this guy she never saw before (or didn't remember him) was finger her clit.

This didn't work for me. Not even the chemistry was good. Actually, there was none. Maybe that's why it was so easy to quit. Nothing made me connect to the story. These scenes were not hot. They were awkward. And ridiculous. Give me something to believe in the MCs relationship /connection and maybe I'd kept going. But beside these horrible interactions, there was nothing.

I really liked this one. Eloise and Gabe, loved them. This is so good, sexy, and hot, hot, hot.

Eloise is in need of a clitoral piercing so she can have an orgasm. She calls for an appointment at a tattoo business and with a female employee. When she arrives she is met with Gabe, the owner of the business and a former classmate.

Gabe is one hot, intense, sexy, tattooed man that wants Eloise. Eloise doesn't know what an orgasm could be until Gabe shows her. Intense, hot, sexy, mind-blowing, thigh shaking!!!!!!

It's time to slow things down, Ms. Sowood. This book, and others written by you lately, have been rushed, so much so that the writing suffers. (A reliable editor, one who will catch all the typos and grammatical mistakes, would be a great addition as well.)

It's a shame, too, because those first couple of books released by this author showed such potential. But what I see is the same level of writing those first books produced.

They are good for quickie reads, as long as the reader doesn't expect more than a quickie in a bathroom. I prefer books that take their time. Too much story is blown through so quickly, it's hard to leave a lasting impression.

Good ideas get lost in the need to churn out quantity rather than quality. The sad thing is that untapped potential is still lurking underneath.

Natalie The Biblioholic says

Eloise has never had an orgasm. Never. Not even one of the self-induced variety. Bummer. When she comes across a magazine article that almost guarantees her an orgasm if she gets a particular piercing, she finds a way to convince herself to get on board. That's what leads her to walk into Gabe's tattoo parlor. But before he gives her what she came for, he's determined to give her what she's really after - the big O.

This was another sweet and steamy read by Simone Sowood. I really liked Gabe and enjoyed how this story seemed to feed off of his pain. He was real and he was a good person. And while I liked Eloise for the most part, my kind feelings towards her had to be earned because I found her to be judgmental, condescending, close-minded and immature at times. In some instances, she appeared to be repressed and reserved, which conflicted with her thoughts, her friends, and her environment. However, I couldn't get enough of the way she finally opened up for Gabe and it was cool to watch these two navigate through their emerging emotions.

Overall Rating ★★★★★

Plot ★★★

Characters & Character Development ★★★

Narration ★★★★★

Story: This story was good. I was surprised when to realize what this story was about. I mainly started it because it was narrated by Muffy Newtown who I love. It was pretty short but there were some hot parts of this book. Eloise definitely was super uptight in the beginning and it was irritating how she didn't think her parents would approve of Gabe because of his tattoos. I was glad when she got over that. Not having locks on her office door at the clinic was a bit stupid to me. Why not if it's her office. I would have preferred if she'd just forgot to lock the door when her and Gabe were caught in her office.

The end annoyed me a bit because of the way that Eloise doubted who Gabe was because of someone else. Also, when Gabe ended up hurting Eloise later. I was really anxious to know what Gabe's secret pain was and was shocked at the discovery when it came out. Overall this was a pretty good story.

Narration: Joe Arden, Muffy Newtown. I love both of these narrators. It was great!
