"I Can't Feel My Face" is a heartbreakingly brief collection of confessional essays written by Kris Kidd and compiled by The Altar Collective. A native Angeleno and working fashion model with a penchant for social media oversharing and self-destruction, Kidd's tumultuous adolescence boasts an abundance of shocking stories to tell- and he does so shamelessly, with a unique voice and an unbreakable spirit you won't soon forget.

From Reader Review I Can't Feel My Face for online ebook

Laura says

this book is stunningly written. its slightly poetic, but in a modern form. kris writes in a way thats almost sociopathic as he portrays an extremely narcissistic persona. such an amazing piece of work, true art. 10 outa 10, would recommend ;)

---

Ernestas Vascenka says

Kris needs to write a novel of epic proportions, because this has been great. Too small to make a literary impact, but with enough room to grow and expand.

Taylor says

This book was so beautifully written. Kris Kidd is so brutally honest in his autobiographical poetry. This and his other book, Down for Whatever, is so amazing

Michaela says

Can't undo the star rating. Haven't read yet.
