When you're the head of the Sex Therapy Department at a university, and you find out your husband has been having an affair, actually a lot of affairs, it's not a good day.

Over 450,000 books sold by this USA Today Bestselling Author. This is the fourth book in the series.

How can you continue to counsel people about their marriage when you've missed all the red flags in your own?

That's Professor Deborah White's predicament. And the predicament becomes a crisis when a beautiful young coed is murdered. Deborah's husband, Geoffrey White, an English professor at the university, had selected the coed to help him with "special assignments," which were usually conducted in a sleazy motel room.

There's no lack of suspects in the murder. Was it Deborah's philandering husband? Or the coed's boyfriend, Dylan? Or even a past lover of Geoffrey's who was jealous because he was having an affair with the coed? And Deborah herself certainly has to be considered as a suspect, since the policy always suspect the spouse in cases like this. Each one has a very good motive for murdering the young woman, but which one did it?

As a favor to her friend Deborah, Kat Denham tries to identify and catch the killer. However, there's one little problem.

There's a good chance Kat will be murdered before she finds the killer.

This is the fourth book in the popular Midwest Cozy Mystery Series.

Ellen White says

Geoffrey had a huge ego and as he looked at the new women students as a man looking for his latest prey. A wonder it never got back to his wife Deborah, for it was common talk among the students and other teachers. For Courtney not having a father, was probably the drawing element. They were plenty that he had told he was ending the affair, so plenty of suspects. Delightful to hear how Kat and Blaine are doing. Hers are always enjoyable and easy to read.

The Professor's Predicament is another installment in Dianne Harman's Midwest Cozy Mystery series. Like the other books by this prolific author, this book is a quick cozy mystery with a cast of interesting characters. The lead character, Kat Denham is recently married, a happy intelligent woman who's a natural sleuth. When a lovely young coed is killed, Kat's friend, Deborah, head of the Sex Therapy Department, and her professor husband quickly come under suspicion. At Deborah's urging, Kat sets out to find the culprit. Like any good cozy mystery, there are plenty of other suspects, clues, red herrings, misdirection--all the elements that make murder mysterious. Whodunit? You'll have to grab this entertaining story and find out for yourself.

I LOVE Dianne Harman books and I have read all the books in this series. There's another one coming up and I've already preordered it. I enjoy the character Kat, her husband, her daughter Lacie and her two dogs! Kat is an author who writes under a pen name. She has a knack for solving murders. In the previous books, she was put in a situation where she had to try to solve the murders. In this book, she is helping a friend b/c the friend asked for her help. Kat felt indebted to her friend since the friend helped her solve a previous murder which included her husband as a suspect. This book along with all the others are very enjoyable and easy reading. There's mystery and suspense. Kat gets into a scary situation at the end. But all ends well with her Rottie as the hero! Kat enjoys cooking and some recipes are included at the end. I can't wait for the next book!

Luckily I never met up with a professor like Geoffrey White in any of the colleges I attended! There is no way I would have helped him with any "special assignments" knowing what the rumors were about him--even to get an easy "A" in his class. How he managed this without his wife ever figuring it out until the day one of the coeds was murdered--and she worked at the same university I will never understand.

Once she does suspect and hires a private eye she is devastated. Of course her husband swears that was the only affair he had-----she goes to her friend Kat Denham to try and exonerate her husband and ultimately herself from being the murderers. There really are an awful lot of suspects and with the aid of her husband's brother, a private investigator, and her Rottweiler. starts investigating.

Thankfully her Rottweiler was with her-----

At least as far as I am concerned this story has a very happy ending--but I think you will agree with me on this one!
