Linda C says

4 Christmas stories of average quality. The Chamberlin and Evanick stories were new for this collection but the other 2 were reprints from 8 years earlier. Evanick's story was sweet, but plot was nothing new; Chamberlin was pure Bridget Jones type plot; Fern Michaels story was cute but again formulaic, Henley's just ok.

Tara says

I'm on the first story. Pretty good right now. I like holidays and romances. It's good but typical (after awhile most romances seem the same to me). Nice fluffy light reading.

Cindy Kester says

Short Holiday stories, read over the holidays. of course as always, enjoyed some and could have left some.

Tammy Raney says

good multi-read book. confused on the extra takes on other books.

Maureen says

A collection of four Christmas stories:

"Merry, Merry" by Fern Michaels, where Andi Evans is ready for war...or would that be love? (eh.)

"Christmas Eve" by Virginia Henley, in which real estate Eve Barlow is snowbound together with firefighter Clint Kelly, and the sparks fly! (this was a good one; I'll look for more work by Henley)

"All I Want" by Holly Chamberlin, where single 30-something Abby Walker wishes for a soul mate for Christmas (this was my favorite, by far!!) and,

"A Misty Harbor Christmas" by Marcia Evanick, about Olivia Hamilton's realization that obnoxious boys from our childhood can grow up into breathtaking men. (This was okay, too)

Jess says

I mainly read this one for the Marcia Evanick story. It was a part of her Misty Harbor series, and this story was great.

the other stories were pretty bad. The worst was the Fern Michaels story and the Holly Chamberlin story.

The other wasn't quite as bad. I wouldn't waste my money on this book though.

Marie says

I enjoyed reading the short stories and I think the reason I liked them was because they had to get to the point. I liked 3 out of the 4 and thought the other story was kind of dumb.

Shannon says

This book was pretty awful, all the Heroines were TSTL. I thought the Virginia Henley one would be good but that one wasn't either. Seriously give this one a pass.

Mazeli Dee says

I loved two out of the four short stories. Merry, Merry was so corny, I didn't finish it.

I like anthologies, they are a great way to enjoy a story quickly & to try new authors without a huge time commitment.

This book is a great example of enjoying an author or two & barely tolerating others. The first story, " A Misty Harbor Christmas " by Marcia Evanick was a sweet story of finding love when going back home. The next story, "All I Want" by Holly Chamberlin was excruciatingly slow and depressing. The heroine was such a selfish, self-centered wimp that she didn't deserve a happy ending. Plus this Christmas season story was so depressing, I wanted to gouge my eyes out.

"Merry Merry" by Fern Michaels has a good plot, but the dialog & flow was so choppy it distracted me from the story. Cute, but a little juvenile.

As for the last story, "Christmas Eve" by Virginia Henley, it had its moments. However, I can't get into an intimate scene with words like coitus and testes...ugh give me a break.
