A funny and cute story in rhyme about a lamb getting assistance from his friends to help him find the ending of his sneeze.

I came across this book randomly at an outdoor book sale. It has become my FAVORITE children's book! My copy is so beat up it looks like the dog ate half of it. We have read this book more than any other in my home. It makes me happy.

Samantha Penrose says

Very cute!
Poor little stuffy nosed Sam the lamb needs to sneeze but cant seem to get one out.
"Can someone help me,

help me please,
to find the ending
of my sneeze?"

He is offered assistance from a hen with a feather, a pig with pepper, and a couple of goats who kick up some dust...no single animal is able to help evoke Sam's sneeze, but with a little team work they manage to get the job done. Baa-Choo! Bless you.

Meg McGregor says

Poor little Sam the Lamb has a cold but he can't sneeze! He tries to get help from his barnyard friends but nothing seems to let him get to the "choo" of his sneeze.

The way Sam is finally able to get his "choo" is comical. Little ones will love this book.

Jennifer says

This was a really fun story to read with my kids. It is about a little lamb who has a cold, but every time he tries to sneeze all he gets out is the Baa, not the choo. So, he goes around the farm and asks the other animals if they can help him find his choo. They try different tricks, like tickling his nose with feathers and sprinkling pepper until finally at the very end of the story he has a really big sneeze. Book has bright, colorful pictures that enhance the story.

Christina says

As far as easy readers for your kids who are just starting to read, this one is a cute one. My boys loved the little story and my oldest enjoyed reading it. It was a really easy read for him but such a little gem as far as pictures and storyline. Much more fun to read than most early/easy readers.

Tasia says

One of my 6 year old students sat down and read this to me. She was able to ask me all sorts of questions, like "What do you think will happen next? Do you think he'll sneeze?" and "What animal do you think he'll meet next?" She was able to make her own predictions as we went along, so we both had great fun trying to guess who would come next to help the lamb sneeze. The ending was cute, and overall we had a great experience sitting down and reading together. Excellent for a student moving forward with reading skills, and great for parents, teachers, or other friends to listen as the young reader moves through sentences.

Jackie says

When Sam the Lamb has trouble finding his "Choo" to go with "Ahhh", he enlists his friends to help him sneeze. Gwen the Hen, Sig the Pig, and Franny Nannygoat, all work together and the results are overwhelming!

Délice says

This book could not be more perfect. The illustrations are adorable and original. The writing has flawless rhythm and rhyme and it has made every member of my family giggle, from age 2 to 33!!

Diane says

"I've got the ahhh but not the choo. No, no this sneeze will never do."

All the animals on the farm try to help Sam, the sheep, find the "end to his sneeze." And when he finally succeeds, look out!

All of Sarah Weeks' beginning chapter books have such a melodic rhyme scheme. They are a joy to read out loud.

Poet's Pulpit says

A fun read. Made my son laugh
