Jack says

Women get kidnapped - men go to the rescue - - more of the same.

But again it was fun to read these old stories

Jack Teague says

Barsoom,ERB,John Carter

Jason says

Clearly the worst of the John Carter works, this is for completists only. The first of the three books this collection contains is run-of-the-mill, while the second book was apparently written by ERB's son for a young audience. The shift in voice from Carter's first-person narration to an omniscient POV is jarring, to say the least. The third book is unfinished, and just sort of stops between chapters, with very little resolved.

Sabina says

I would have loved to have read this but the software got into a loop and never would open it!

Troy says

Llana of Gathol was the usual decent ERB Barsoom adventure.

The second one isn't as good. Two smaller "novels":

The first, "John Carter and the Giant of Mars" is written in third person, unlike ALL the other books.

The second, "Skeleton Men of Jupiter" ends abruptly, and doesn't resolve the problems.

Caleb says

A good yarn, especially for its time. Makes me want to read the first one in the series (this is all I could find in the library)

Rachel says

One of my all-time favorite series...Burroughs is a master craftsman & I never tire of these stories...
