From Reader Review Ms. Marvel (2014-2015) #19 for online ebook

Steven says

Kamala Khan as Ms. Marvel is one of the best things I have read in awhile. This comic run truly captured how confusing and insane being a teenager can be, especially adding in superpowers. However the comic still has all the fun of being a comic book. Everyone should read this.

Miranda says

Wilson brings a ton of heart and truly emotional gutpunches to yet another annual Marvel Universe event from the editors. (Seriously, y'all, give it a rest for a year or two, please. Stop screwing over your writers like that!) Ms Marvel is one of my favorite heroes ever and this is a great "ending."

Sheryl says

Gah, my heart felt that little tiny bit of flutter. This was a good ending to season one. Admittedly mushy, but totally forgivable and lovable as Kamala only knows how to pull off. Cannot wait for the next season to begin!

falling asleep reading says

This one was so cute. Kamala has really grown up a lot over the course of this series. Her character development has been incredible. This issue specifically really focused on her individual relationships and I LOVED it!

Allie says

Wilson is doing a really good job writing through this Marvel apocalyptic reset. Love the relationships in this one (Kamala with her parents, Nakia, & Bruno)! I still can't with the ending!! odjfiosofjsf

Fátima López Sevilla says

Transition... transition and growing for Kamala, transition comics... I don't like them, they feel like so little... still, can't wait to see what happens to Kamala now she opened to her loved ones a bit more!

Zemira (Kylo Ren fangirl) Warner says

Infinite heart eyes emoji

Samah Rifla says

this is so beautiful i'm crying!!!!

Regsly says

This new hero has brought to light certain minorities and the possibility of acceptance. Being so, the think I would like to stress (and can't do it enough) about this issue is the fact Kamala's community opened a Non-Denominational Non-Judgemental Prayer Area in their school turned safe-house (kudos to Loki). And different people are calmly doing their religious activities in the same tiny spot without conflict, without hatred, without disrespect for others' choices or liberties. Just acceptance and that is what love is all about. Furthermore, religions teach us to love. That is the message I want to leave for all of you.

Tara says

Such a fantastic ending to this season. I always liked Kamala but after this issue she has become one of my heroes. The interactions at the end with her family and friends was so good and that final scene with Bruno made me cry like a baby. What a way to end the story, what a way to spend what could be the last day on earth!

Sara (A Gingerly Review) says

Yep, I need to read the next batch

Sarah says

My favorite of the this arc--I love the stuff with Kamala and her mom and Kamala and Bruno.

Cory says

So much dust in my eyes.....I need a kleenex.

Amber says

A beautiful and heartfelt ending! The action is stripped away in favor of heartfelt conversations with friends and loved ones. When it comes to final ending/apocalypse scenarios like this many times the protagonist is running around trying to stop said apocalypse from happening. Instead here we have Kamala slowing down and stopping so that she can just spend time with those who matter most to her. It's a beautiful and heartbreaking issue that brings everything nicely to a close and shows what should really be important in our lives and how we can all be honest with ourselves and those we care about.

Jill Guccini says

Ooh this one was all about feelings so obviously it was my FAVORITE.
