I love Tink she had so much energy and jarek dis not know what to do with her. He seem to be perplexed most of the time. I found this book funny and heartwarming

The Book Junkie Reads . . . says

Tink was vivacious, open, sweet, and very friendly. She was smart. She was tired. She went through a door without thought to her own safety. This was were the two worlds collide and bring about a revelation for a world so far away. J'kar was the huge alien warrior that changed the world of one Tink Bell. She changed his in ways that would be felt through his whole planet. Before he can even blink she's gone. Apart could be the death for them both. But there are other forms of danger that could take J'kar's Tink away from him.

I love RITA. Cosmos. The characters were engaging, interesting, and otherworldly. This Tink found her Neverland and so much more. Love this introduction to the world of Cosmos' Gateway.

Narrator Suzanne Elise Freeman did do a wonderful job on Tink. It was something about the pitch and diction that made Tink truly come to life for me she was free, open, friendly, sweet, strong, and confident. I could feel all those things in the narration. The audio was clear and hiccup free.

Sadie Bissett says

I absolutely freaking love this book. I have read it over and over again. Anytime I want a little pick me up, this is the book I read, Jasmine "Tinker" Bell, better known as "Tink", is an adorable character. With her curly, blonde hair and her petite stature, she seems rather fragile and meek. But, absolutely not. She is smart, like off-the-charts smart, plus she also has a "smart" mouth. She is tough as all get out, and will fight for what she thinks is right. She is a mechanic and lives with Cosmos, a gorgeous brainiac, and no, they are more like brother and sister. No love-triangle here.

Cosmos has built a portal to who-knows-where, but he needs Tink to upgrade his power source, which she does and, boy howdy, it opens and..., what do you expect?!?! Of course, the little hellion went to have a look-see. She finds alien beings, like a giant Iguana creature (she totally kicks its a$$), plus the hunky alien, that ends up being her bond mate.

Now, she may be a virgin-by-choice, but she is well informed, thanks to her mom, and she can't wait for that perfect guy, you know, the one. Well, J'kar“Tag Krell Manok, a Prime warrior from a very, very distant galaxy, ends up being "the one". But he is a gorgeous, giant of a man. He has silver eyes and dark skin, with tattoos that run down the side of his face, down his neck, all the way to his hip bone. J'kar is the ultimate Alpha-male. He is protective, possessive, but ever so gentle and loving to his "little one", Tink.

This is a steamy, sexy novel. He is alien, so some of the sex stuff is not quite the same, but I'm not going to tell you, because it will spoil the surprise. This is not a BDSM book, but there is a small amount of bondage, but it is necessary to the alien story line. You will have to see for yourself.

Overall, I think all those dumb-a$$ reviewers that talk about how Tink was not believable in the things she could do, or that "RITA", a computer program Tink's mom created was too ridiculous to believe, well...

One: Everyone knows that there are crazy smart people out there, like two year-old kids reading encyclopedias. There was a fourteen year-old in the town I live that graduated from med school, she has a doctorate and is now going to Australia to be part of medical research team. So to say that Tink, who is 20 years old, could not be some sort of genius is just stupid and ill-informed.

Two: RITA is a computer program that Tilly Bell (Tink's mom) created. Tilly is a computer geek, who designs and develops software and computer programs for engineering firms around the world. Uhh, these people do exist that actually perform these types of jobs. So, what your point again?!?!

People, this is FICTION! It has aliens in it! Everything is not supposed to be believable anyway. Geez!

I love this story. I love the characters. I love the out-of-this-world sex (pun intended). It has action, attempted murder, funny "Meg Ryan" moment (you'll see) and sweet lovin'. Yep, I just talked myself into another read-thru.

Gotta go, my e-reader is calling me!

4.5 Tink's Neverland Stars

I am not new to this author, sometimes her books are huge hits for me and sometimes they are just ok. This was a hit. She does Science Fiction Romance soooooo well.

I loved that Tink was small but mighty and that she might be small and have a tiny voice but she is big in heart and spirit.

J'kar is the alpha Alien and I know that might seem wrong just saying that but this book was awesome. His species getting a little turned upside down because of a human you have to laugh at that. Oh the irony am I write? ;)

I liked that all they have to do is touch and they would know if they are meant to be, and the pull is there. I think that is sweet and something that is proof they belong, they might not be the same "race" but they belong.

I really enjoyed the narration to; I think she does a great job giving the characters their own voices.

You don't have to like my review but its 100% my opinion, and I am allowed to have it.

Tinker and J'Kar. This is over the top silly, including the heroine. She's way too perfect, jack of all trades little miss perfect. But, strangely, I really enjoyed her. The Hero, was more of a cookie cutter character. No real depth. He could be one of many heroes by this author. That doesn't mean he wasn't mr. alpha sexy guy... Tinker's genius friend, Cosmos, has created a gateway to another galaxy. Late after work, Tinker stumbles into Cosmos' doorway and into an alien spaceship where she saves a boy from a scary alien. It's a series of quirky yet dangerous events back and forth through Cosmos' gate until Tinker meets J'Kar's parents. Honestly it's pretty silly, but in a very entertaining way. Again, the author does too much setting up for the rest of the series in the first book, but that's my pet peeve. Really this is a fun tongue in cheek mars needs women romance.

I didnt connect with either MC. Not even the smexy times could save this one. The story has ton of potential but the world building took a back seat to all the sex.

I kept thinking if Tink represents the females of Earth, then we are all doomed!! She was just too over the top in everything she did! And so repetitive! And call me a prude but what was with all the kissing (on the lips!) between Tink and every guy in her proximity? Is it possible to be affectionate without having to stroke/pat/touch and kiss other guys? Especially since these alien guys were so receptive to that type of physical affection? -IMO - it felt creepy how she took it in stride that she could make them aroused so easily. Like they were almost childlike in their knowledge of sex and she somehow managed to make it vulgar rather than educational. It just left me feeling dirty.

Not continuing with this serious. Luckily this was a free read on my Kindle.

The one good thing that came of reading this is that it reminded me of Johanna Lindsey's Heart of a Warrior. It has some smexy times but the sci-fi plot is fleshed out and the world building is pretty awesome. I smell a re-read of that book in my near future ;)

This was a cute read that reminded me a lot of Ral's Woman in some ways. (I guess when you're an 'Alien guy w human female' story addict, similarities are bound to happen.)

 SPOILER WARNING **

Jasmine "Tink" Bell is a busy girl. She's a mechanic, a student and plays in a band on the weekends. She lives in a large warehouse with her BFF who happens to be a guy named Cosmos. Cosmos sounds big, smart and yummy, but these two are just friends. Cosmos is an inventor. Tink frequently works with Cosmos on his inventions.

As the book begins, Cosmos is out of town and Tink is working on the power generator for Cosmos' latest invention. Tink accidentally triggers it, and it's a doorway to another place. Tink sees a guy fighting a losing battle with another humanoid she thinks looks like an iguana. She can't help herself and goes through the doorway and clobbers the iguana man with her hammer. Then she patches up the human-like guy she saved - who happens to be the little brother of the commander of the space ship they're on. The doorway closes and Tink helps get the guy Derek (sp?) to someone who can help heal him. When she makes it to the bridge, all the guys are staring at her in silence.

(You also get to read multiple POVs through out the book which is kind of nice)

The commander can't take his eyes off her and she she accidentally touches him, his mating mark flares to life on his hand. Tink also gets a mark on her hand. At this point, a new dimensional doorway opens, Cosmos grabs her and the doorway closes. J'kar, the commander is going nuts because Tink was his mate.

There was some hokey-ness that occurs. It's explained by Tink & Cosmos super computer (RITA) copies itself (via Tink's phone) into the alien space ship & begins learning their language and about the aliens.

Meanwhile, back in their home, Tink is eating less and sleeping/crying more. Cosmos is concerned. A week later, the alien's open a doorway into Cosmos home, knock him out, then coerce him into taking them to find Tink performing with her band.

A near death experience of Tink getting stabbed by a senator's son has them taking Tink to their spaceship, Tink makes friends with all the guys on the ship & explaining oral sex to them. Later on they see Tink & J'kar making out in a corridor. They all have perpetual hard-ons for earth women now. A video of both session gets out and everyone sees it. J'kar isn't happy about it. All of these "Prime" alien man want/love/pant Tink because their (very few) females don't enjoy sex and generally just 'put up with it'. Human women are passionate and enjoy sex.

These aliens have fangs that come out during sex that they use to inject a horny/fertile chemical into women. So of course J'kar knocks Tink up within days...with twins. (Which has never happened on their planet/history)

When they get to his planet, J'kar's father, the King is an absolute dick to Tink and thinks she's controlling his sons. He orders her to be medically inspected.

Tink has a meltdown since her phobia is doctors.

Tink wants her family with her so badly, so since J'kar's father learned about the oral sex thing and likes it, he approves one member of her family being brought to their world.

Meanwhile, they're all scared Tink will be kidnapped by a rival clan, and the senator's son that stabbed Tink has escaped from their jail and is loose on their world. (They brought him to kill if she died).

Queue next book.

So, it was kind of a HEA, but not quite.

Definitely erotica, M/F but don't expect Ellora's Cave level of (ohholycrapIgottagobealonedforawhile) style erotica.

Recommended, but as filler reading.

(You can see the next 5 in the series pretty easily since Tink has two single sisters, single guy friend Cosmos and single best gal pals in the band.)

I'll just say it right out. SE Smith has potential. There were moments in the story, but those were few and far in between. SE Smith needs more experience as a writer in order to bring out her potential.

Here are my complaints with this book (I'm too lazy to put it into a nice structured format, so here it is in point form):

- Mary Sue type main character.
- Flat characters.
- Too much info dumping. Like really. All chapter 1 is is info dumping.
- Bad writing:

A tall, dark hair man was fighting with... Tink shook her head again. A... What the hell was that? Tink moved closer as the man raised his sword. Holy crap, the guy had a huge sword! The man looked like he was fighting a big iguana! The other creature was hissing, its tongue moving in and out as it swung what looked like a double-edged sword toward the tall, dark-haired man. The dark-haired man moved backward trying to stay out of the iguana dude's reach.

Bad grammar on the first part and repetitive overuse of the description. We KNOW he's tall and dark-haired. Stop repeating it. There is no other 'he' around. So it's okay to use 'he.' We won't be confused.

-Unfocused writing and abuse of limited third person POV. For example, one minute we're in J'kar's head and the next (no scene break) we are in Borj's head. This happened in other instances as well. There's a lot of 'head hopping'.

And, in regards to the unfocused part, Smith introduces us to and gives details (in the form of info dumping) about side characters that we only ever see once--very briefly.

-There's practically no plot. The one thing that could have been used to advance the plot, wasn't. I'm talking about the random (view spoiler). The author's technique in employing it was very poor, and it was a totally random plot line that went nowhere. Overall, the author had very poor plot construction.

-The romance between the two main leads was unbelievable. It was based purely on lust and nothing else.

-Other aspects of the story also had me questioning the author's credibility, such as RITA, the super advanced portal, and the super smart geniuses around Tink (like her amazing family members and Cosmos).

Consensus: I decided to try out this author only because she advertised herself as winning some kind of Author of the Year 2014 award, but I'm really iffy about chancing another book. Maybe I should try reading a book published in 2014 or later? It's obvious her earlier works need serious, heavy editing. And no, proof-editing is not the same thing.

Cute sci fi romance/erotica in space. Might have rated this higher but I just couldn't get with the way the heroine, Tink, behaved with all of the other men. She was very touchy-feely, flirtatious and affectionate with ALL the men around. That included lots of hugs, kisses on cheeks, kisses on lips, lots of talk about sex and even verbal directions on how to use your mouth sexually (which caused many of the men to orgasm, while listening to her). Her relationship with the guy (Cosmos) she was living with in the beginning was supposedly a brotherly friendship, but they too would kiss on the lips goodbye, and they were very physically affectionate all of the time. It was all just a little weird for me. I felt bad for her mate J'Kar because apparently she is just like that and he will have to live with it.

I am planning to read the next book, but if the heroine behaves the same, that will probably be it for me with this series. The communal love thing isn't really my style.

4 HIGHLY AMUSING STARS

I don't honestly know what it was about this book that had me charmed!
But I was under its spell, or maybe "Tink" magic worked on me as well.
This book I just loved it!!

This story was completely unlike anything I had ever read before! It was just fun and different. But mostly it was unique!

The hero J'kar, was a complete alpha and totally gone over his "Bond mate" Tink. He was all about protecting her and keeping her safe.

Tink was sweet and sassy with oh so fun loving in nature that I wanted to read about her. She was a fun loving fixer/singer, who goes through a magic gateway into another world. A galaxy where there are few women and man battle monster to protect their mates and they way of life.

When they got together it was awesome! But the heroine was very conflicted because her whole world was literally going to change!

I SERIOUSLY LOVED THIS STORY!

The stand out moments for me in this book was when Tink gave the Alien crew the sex talk about oral sex. A la Meg Ryan.

Seriously, that was a hoot!

I could just imagine their hot and bothered faces as she described the act!

And the hero, when he experienced it via their psychic connection.

And also this scene when she finds out she is expecting twins

"What is her problem?"

Tink had had enough. Sitting up straight in J'kar's arms she glared at the High Chancellor. "I'll tell you what my problem is buddy. Your son is one potent son of a bitch. I'm pregnant with twins! You try landing on an alien planet, deal with a dickhead like you, and find out you are going to have, not one but two babies, and see if you don't feel a little overwhelmed." Tink shouted in anger and frustration.

"Baby?" Teriff whispered.

"Two babies?" J'kar said staring at Tink's stomach totally stunned.

"Good breeding, brother." Derik said with a huge grin on his face.

"What is a 'dickhead'?" Teriff asked as he poured another glass of potent wine into his cup.

FYI: Teriff is J'kar's father and he is the Dickhead High Chancellor.

I was just ROTFL!

Honestly, this book had me alternating between laughing and self-fanning, as it was funny and smoking hot! I hope that this whole book series is going to be winner for me and that they are all like this.

I hope you will give it a try, if only for the laughs.

Now it's a good thing this is a book series that has been completely finished so I can just pick up the next book and the next and the next.

But it's also why it lost a star.

It left me hanging! And I don't like that!

Great news also, is that it's completely safe.

Hot Damn!! I have a new favorite author!!

Lyndi W. says

Yeah, I don't really have anything interesting to say about this. Nice little mindless read. Tink was a Mary Sue, but amusing enough to be forgiven for it. The aliens were interesting and it looks like the sexual revolution is about to erupt on planet Baade. Not sure if I'll read the next one, but the story arc continues with an unresolved threat and Tink's sister being snatched from Earth by her alien bond mate.

Whoops. I forgot to mention the poor editing. Tink is suddenly Trisha, words are missing, the s on the end of plural words is gone, etc. Nothing atrocious, but enough to snag your attention every now and then as you stumble over a word that just doesn't feel right.

August 2018 reread: That editing wasn't atrocious, but the poorly timed exposition was. Things feel very disjointed and unresolved this time around. Definitely didn't enjoy it as much.

Erica says

I did not expect much from this book given the cover which looks like a porn DVD and given the cheesy description. What a pleasant surprise!!! I loved it! Very, very hot sex...J'kar is a total alpha which is hot, and Tink has a lot of spirit in her and spunk! Granted, the story is a LITTLE unbelievable, and the whole construction of the portal, RITA, the addition of English to the translators and the chips in the humans' ears so they could be understood was a little fuzzy to me, but not critical to the enjoyment of the book. (view spoiler) What surprised me the MOST out of this book was how much I laughed throughout it, hence the humor tag. It was absolutely hysterical watching all the reaction to Tink's sex education tape not only on the ship but once they got home to Baard. It really wasn't so much sci-fi as it was just two worlds coming together and two people finding their soulmates in each other. Loved it, loved it, loved it and it ended with J'kar and Tink fucking in the shower against the wall. For me, that's like the cherry on the sundae.
